

ADAM MAZEK
EARTH WARS

EARTH WARS

Before you, the second science-fiction story from January 2018 inspired by the work of Stanislaw Lem (post: "Earth Wars").

Boxoids suddenly landed. Nobody expected them. They left their spaceship to make contact with human civilization.

• Post "Earth Wars" (from p. 17 to p. 23)

EARTH WARS

Initially, they unsuccessfully wanted to get in touch with material things, trying to imitate human faces.

Suddenly a stream of light focused on them.
Nobody asked about anything.

EARTH WARS

The soldiers started firing. Some robots have been damaged, others destroyed.

EARTH WARS

• Roboticon

• Xcom

One of the saved robots, named Roboticon, demonstrated his courage. With a highly specialized device called Xcom, he called for reinforcements that rescued the survivors. Roboticon managed to save the mission.

The Boxoids have completed their mission by destroying three human cities.

ADAM MAZEK
EARTH WARS

EARTH WARS

This was the only confirmed contact of people with space civilization. One of the reports, prepared by Boxoids, describes this duel as worthless and useless. Xerox, the spaceship commander who came to the rescue, described the Earthlings as "aggressive, silly, strange, made of water, creatures." He categorized Earth as "a small piece of stone, located somewhere in a wild, unexplored corner of the Universe." The Boxoid lost spacecraft that accidentally landed on Earth wanted to ask for a way back to their galaxy. Their navigation system has failed. Commander Xerox wrote in his recommendations to other Boxoid spacecraft that they should avoid this part of the universe. It is nonsense to upset those stupid and aggressive people. They will not understand the processes governing the universe, and their aggressive behavior is the only thing they can give to other highly developed cosmic civilizations.

THE END

- Kseroks on the battlefield

